design on purpose

We believe that great intention begets great design. It gives your website or product its purpose. That purpose is to give your users the best experience possible. We offer design services including web design, user interface design, brand and software development which offer a means to that end. Some call it hard work; we call it design on purpose.

Your Rights Online: Judges Challenge IP Wiretap Rules

Posted by Zonk on Friday May 05, @05:31PM FROM THE NOT-IN-MY-COURTROOM DEPT.

WebHostingGuy writes to mention an MSNBC article on an appeals panel harshly challenging the Bush administration's wiretap policies. New rules from the FCC would make it easier for police and FBI agents to wiretap IP-based phone conversations. From the article: "At [one] point in the hearing, Edwards told the FCC's lawyer that his arguments were 'gobbledygook' and 'nonsense.' The court's decision was expected within several months. In an unrelated case last year affecting digital television, two of the same three judges determined the FCC had significantly exceeded its authority and threw out new government rules requiring anti-piracy devices in new video devices. Lewis was also the losing lawyer in that case, and Edwards also was impassioned then in his criticisms of the FCC."

Developers: Web 2.0 Recipes With PHP + DHTML

Posted by Zonk on Friday May 05, @04:51PM FROM THE WEB-2.0-THE-EASY-WAY DEPT.

An anonymous reader writes "Take a look at these full simple code examples for dynamic elements for your web apps, including: Ad boxes, Pop-ups, Spinners, and Tabs. Easy ways to show and hide content on the page." From the article: "Incorporating JavaScript into your page makes the page dynamic and creates a more compelling user experience. Users can get more data more quickly, look at information from different aspects, and seamlessly navigate the site -- and the site doesn't have to go back to the server for lots
